COTTON CROP PLACED AT 7,037,000 BALES.

Washington. — Discouraged by low prices and inability to market their crops to advantage, cotton growers have reduced planting by almost 50 per cent., figures issued by the Department of Agriculture showed.

The 1921 cotton crop was estimated at 7,037,000 bales, while production for last year totaled 13,439,603 bales.

The condition of the crop on August 25 was 49.3 per cent. of normal as compared with 64.7 on July 25 and 67.5 per cent. on August 25, 1920.

The condition report forecasts a yield per acre of about 127 pounds.

BULL-DOG DRUMMOND

The Adventures of a Demobilized Officer Who Found Peace Dull

By CYRIL McNEILE

"Did I not say," he answered, "that there was power in the box? But in the name of that power-unknown to you-I warn you: Do not touch those pearls till the light has burned low in the brazier. If you do they will disappear-never to return. Watch, but do not touch!"

Slowly he backed toward the window, unperceived in the general excitement; and Hugh dodged rapidly toward the car. It struck him that the seance was over, and he just had time to see Lakington snatch some thing which appeared to have been let down by a string from above, before turning into the bushes and racing for the car. As it was he was only a second or two in front of the other, and the last vision he had through a break in the trees, before they were spinning smoothly down the deserted road, was an open window in Laidley Towers from which dense volumes of vapor poured steadily out.
Of the house party behind, waiting for the light to burn low in the brazies, he could see no sign through the opaque wall of green fog.

It took five minutes, so he gathered afterward from a member of the house party, before the light had burned sufficiently low for the duchess to consider it safe to touch the pearls.

In various stages of asphyxiation the assembled guests had peered at the box, while the cynical comments of the men were rightly treated by the ladies with the contempt they deserved. Was the necklace not there, wrapped in its gold and silver tissue, where a few minutes before there had been nothing?

"Some trick of that beastly light," remarked the duke peevishly. heaven's sake throw the dam' thing out of the window.'

of thing, the house of lords might be some use to somebody.'

When two minutes later they stared horror-struck at a row of ordinary marbles laboriously unwrapped from a piece of gold and silver tissue, the duke's pungent agreement with his sentiment passed uncontradicted. In fact, it is to be understood that over the scene which followed it was best to draw a decent veil.

Even now he was not quite clear how the trick had been worked. That there had been two cabinets, that was clear-one false, the other the real one. That they had been changed at the crucial moment by the girl Irma was also obvious. But how had the pearls disappeared in the first case and then apparently reappeared again? For one thing he was quite certain Whatever was inside the parcel of gold and silver tissue which, for all he knew, they might be still staring at, it was not the historic necklace. And he was still puzzling it over in his mind when the car swung into the drive at The Elms.

thing in the room was the crimina himself, and at the moment he was seated at the table with the Chinese cabinet in front of him. With a quick turn of his wrist he pried open two flaps of wood, and folded them back against the side. Then he lifted out a parcel of gold and silver tissue from nderneath.

"My hat!" muttered Hugh, "what fool I was not to think of it! Just a false bottom actuated by closing the lid."

But the American, whistling gently to himself, had his eyes fixed on the rope of wonderful pearls which Lakington was holding lovingly in his

And after that you'll never see anything again."

"Say, he's a dream-that guy," muttered the American. "What pearls are those he's got?"

"The duchess of Lampshire's," whispered Hugh. "Lifted right under the nose of the whole bally house party. The four watchers on the roof glued their eyes to the glass. And the sight they saw a moment or two afterward stirred even the phlegmatic Mr. Green

A heavy door was swinging slowly open, apparently of its own volition though Hugh, stealing a quick glance at Lakington, saw that he was press ing some small studs in a niche in one of the walls. Then he looked back at the door, and stared dumfounded. It was the mysterious cup poard of which Phyllis had spoken to him, but nothing he had imagined from her words had prepared him for the reality. It seemed to be literally crammed to overflowing with the most priceless loot. Gold vessels of fantastic and beautiful shapes littered the floor; while on the shelves were ar ranged the most wonderful collection of precious stones, which shone and scintillated in the electric light till their glitter almost blinded the

The pearls were carefully placed in a position of honor, and for a few ments Lakington stood gloating over his collection.

"Do you see them, Captain Drum-mond?" he asked quietly. "Each thing obtained by my brain—my hands. All nine-mine!" His voice rose to a shout. "And you pit your puny wits against me." With a laugh he crossed the room, and once more pressed the studs. The door swung slowly to and closed without a sound, while Lakington still shook with silent mirth.

"And now"-he resumed, rubbing his we will prepare your the chauffeur who neglected his or-

For a few minutes he bent ove the chemicals, and then he poured the mixture into the water which half filled the long bath at the end of the room. "About five minutes before we're quite ready," he announced. "Just time for the chauffeur."

He went to a speaking-tube, down which he blew. Somewhat naturally there was no answer, and Lakington frowned.

"A stupid fellow," he remarked soft-"But there is no hurry; I will deal with him later."

Lakington returned to the chair which contained as he thought, his chief enemy, and was standing beside it with an unholy joy shining on his

And even as he spoke, the words died away on his lips, and with a dreadful cry he sprang back. For with a dull, heavy thud the body of the dead German Heinrich rolled off the chair and sprawled at his feet. "My God!" screamed Lakington

"What has happened? I-I-' He rushed to the bell and pealed i frantically, and with a smile of joy Hugh watched his frenzied terror. No one came in answer to the ring, and Lakington dashed to the door, only to recoil into the room with a choking noise in his throat. Outside in the hall stood four masked men, each with a revolver pointing at his heart. "My cue." muttered Hugh, "And you understand, fellows, don't you?he's my meat."

The next moment he had disappeared down the ladder, and the three remaining watchers stared motionles at the grim scene. For Lakington had shut the door and was crouching by the table, his nerve utterly gone. And all the while the puffed, bloated body of the German sprawled on the

"You sent for your chauffeur, Henry

"What do you mean?" muttered Lakington thickly.

"I drove you back from Laidley Towers tonight," said Hugh with a slight smile. "The proper man was foolish and had to be killed." He advanced a few steps into the room, and the other shrank back. "You look frightened, Henry. Can it be that the young swine's wits are, after all, etter than yours?"

"What do you want?" gasped Lakington, through dry lips.

"I want you, Henry-just you. Hitherto you've always used gangs of your ruffians against me. Now gang occupies this house. But I'm not going to use them. It's going to be just-you and I. Stand up, Henry; stand up—as I have always stood up to you." He crossed the room and stood in front of the cowering man. "Take half-take half," he screamed.

I've got treasure—I've ..."

And Drummond hit him a fearful low on the mouth.

"I shall take all, Henry, to return to their rightful owners. Boys"-he raised his voice-"carry out these other two, and undo them.' The four masked men came in, and carried out the two chairs. "The intimidated rabbit, Henry, and the kindly gentleman you put to guard Miss Benton," he remarked as the door closed. "So now we may regard ourselves as being alone. Just you and I. And one of us, Lakington you devil in human form-is going in

"No, Lakington: I'm not going to murder you." A gleam of hope came into the other's eyes. "But I'm going to fight you in order to decide which of us two ceases to adorn the earth; that is, if your diagnosis of the contents of the bath is correct. What little gleam of pity I might have possessed for you has been completely extinguished by your present exhibition of nauseating cowardice. Fight. you worm, fight; or I'll throw you in!"

And Lakington fought. The sudden complete turning of the tables had for moment destroyed his nerve; now, at Drummond's words, he recovered imself. There was no mercy on the soldier's face, and in his inmost heart Lakington knew that the end had come For strong and wiry though he was, he was no match for the other. Relentlessly he felt himself being forced toward the deadly liquid he had prepared for Drummond, and as the to the edge of the bath and his strug- side the soap." It was during the next hour or two that the full value of Mr. Jerome K. Green as an acquisition to the party became apparent. Certain other preparations in honor of Peterson's arrival were duly carried out, and then arose the question of the safe in which the all-important ledger was kept.

"There it is," said Drummond, pointing to a heavy steel door flush with the wall, on the opposite side of the room to the big one containing Lakington's ill-gotten treasure. "And it doesn't eem to me that you're going to open that one by pressing any buttons in the wall."

"Then, Captain," drawled the Amer can. "I guess we'll open it otherwise It's sure plumb easy. I've been getting gay with some of the household effects, and this bar of soap sort of aught my eye."

From his pocket he produced some ordinary yellow soap, and the others lanced at him curiously.

"I'll just give you a little demonstra-tion," he continued, "of how our swell cracksmen over the water open safes when the owners have been so tactless as to remove the keys."

Dexterously he proceeded to seal up every crack in the safe door with the soap, leaving a small gap at the top insealed. Then round that gap he built what was to all intents and pur poses a soap dam.

"If any of you boys," he remarked to the intent group around him, "think of taking this up as a means of livelihood, be careful of this stuff." From another pocket he produced an indiarubber bottle. "Don't drop it on the floor unless you want to be measured for your coffin. There'll just be a boot and some bits to bury.

The group faded away, and the American laughed. "Might I ask what it is?" murmured

Hugh politely from the neighborhood of the door. "Sure thing, Captain," returned the detective, carefully pouring some of the liquid into the soap dam. "That is irony of the thing struck him, the what I told you I'd got-gelignite; or, sweat broke out on his forehead and as the boys call it, the oil. It runs he cursed aloud. At last he backed in-

But in each district there appeared ten or a dozen names of men who were euphemistically described as lecturers; while at the end of the book there appeared nearly fifty names-both of men and women-who were proudly denoted as first-class lecturers. And if Drummond had rubbed his eyes at some of the names on the organizing staffs, the first-class general ecturers deprived him of speech.

No Success Without Effort. It's seldom you can do what you vant to do the first time you try. be sure if you have been working along a given-line there may not be any difficulty in your doing what is comparatively new without trouble. On the other hand there are few people who are gifted enough to walk off with the palm the first time the task comes up. Failure is not so much a matter of lack of ability as it is of unorganized effort. When young men learn to plod along until they are nasters of the thing they would do there will be no question about success. Too many want to succeed without effort. Nature is a little slow in rewarding such .- Grit.

Side Draperies Should Be of Tints of Gayly Hued Material in Keeping With Finish.

Side draperies on a window tend to shut out both light and air, so they really are not desirable. A room, especially a colonial room, done in soft colors calls for a note of bright color near the window. The newest way to obtain this without the use of overdraperies is to make your curtains of plain net and then embroider them in gayly colored wool. Bright, oldfashioned flowers lend themselves to

UNCLE'S ESTATE

By VIVIAN BURBANK.

When Willie McIntosh pushed the button at 26 Forest street he felt of his tie once more, drew in his under lip, and then let it roll back with something like a smack, clicked his heels together, and, when the door finally opened, Willie was at his best.

"I have something of interest-" "No, thank you," answered the comely looking woman in a crisp, high pitched voice. The door would have gone to with a bang only-Willie's foot was there.

"My dear madam-"Don't you dear madam me-"It will take just a few moments to

"And I haven't any few moments to spare listening to you explain why I should use the kind of soap you got there, or the shoe-blacking, the brushes, holders, extracts, furniture polish or anything that you got in that

"I've bit a lot of times, but I told Aggie just the other day, when some scamp sold me some useless eggless stuff that I wouldn't feed to the hens, that I was done! And that ain't the first time I've been stung, either. One of those smooth, oily gents came to the door not long ago with one of them vacuums. Fool that I was, I lets him in; well, he did clean the parlor rug, and me a-telling him all the time that I didn't want the pesky thing. What's more, I was foolish enough to get him the glass of water he asked me for so nice like, and Aggie and me has been ooking for things ever since."

"If you will but listen-" "I'll do no such thing! If I hadn't listened to the phony photographer that came here and took the only picture of Jim, my first husband, a-prom ising he'd bring back such a swell picture, the copy of the one I gave him, only in colors, and a big gold frame, I'd still have the $3 I paid on account. It ain't that I want to be hard on you, my man, but I just won't buy anything I don't want."

"But I don't want to sell you any-

"Humph—that's what they all say. That's the very words the woman said when she left the trial bottle of washing fluid, and glory be! It warn't a week before she was back looking for the 30 cents she said I owed her for the stuff. I've been the laughing-stock of this family long enough!"

Willie McIntosh mopped his brow and said something under his breath that wasn't one bit like Willie. Once more he tried to get in a word edge

"Sarah Matilda Waite Witherspoon." "You're clever, young man! You're clever! The whole name, too. They tell me that's a great trick you fellows got-getting our names from the neighbors. I can't say that I ever thought I owned a real pretty name, yet I do say that it has rather a certain dignity to it, for all that! Great heavens, a woman my age standing here banter ing words with a peddler. Ought to know better. You just trot along. I ain't gonna buy a copper's worth of any smooth looking man with a valise. That's as true as—as true as I'll never come into a copper of Hiram Maddi-son's money—though by rights I ought to—and, I may yet!"

"I—wait a minute—that's it—' shouted Willie."

"It is, is it? So you're another one of those fellows that got wind of me likely to come into Uncle Hiram's money, eh? Now, what kind of stocks would you suggest that I buy? That's if I get it-just if I get it." "Yes," gulped Willie, "that's-

"Yes, nothing!" went on Sarah With erspoon, placing a plump hand over each generous hip. "He ain't dead yet! I've waited so long now, that I just know that it will go to foreign mis-

"No-no-listen, Sarah-" "Don't you call me Sarah! Just who lo you think you are?"

Willie, nigh exhausted, took off his hat, put down his valise, slowly fumbled in his vest pocket and drew out a little white card.

"My card." "William MacIntosh," read Sarah, aloud. "Not Uncle Hiram's lawyer?" "The same, at your service."

"My land! Why didn't you say-so?" "Pardon me, but why didn't you give ne a chance? Your uncle has passed away." "You don't say! How sudden! Poor, dear uncle—and—and—er—do you happen to know anything about—the money? "The late Hiram Maddison went through his money. As you are the nly living relative, I've come to you in regard to settlement of some of the late Hiram Maddison's bills, etc."

Here Willie coughed and took his time. Well he knew that there would be no further interruptions for a few moments, anyway; as Sarah Matilda Waite Witherspoon lay at his feet in Color Scheme Is Pronouncedly Prevalent in Paris.

Fashion is Carried to Extremes and Some Costumes Are Regarded as Absurdities.

Since the Grande Semaine—the imortant race week which closes the Paris season—set the fashlon of black and white, states a French fashion writer, it is natural to find the magpie colors almost universal at Biarritz. But down here in this exotic corner of the Basses Pyrenees new fashions are launched-the fashions of tomorrow.

This is specially the case in the month of September, as then the wealthy Spanish beauties make extensive purchases for the winter season at Madrid.

People are still talking and quarrel ing over Mrs. Smith-Wilkinson's amazing toilette at the Grand Steeple A very important group of Paris elegantees, women who direct the styles rather than follow them, expostulated loudly against the introduction of sensational eccentricities from London on a Paris race course; they said-and I think they were right-that such exaggerations would certainly take away from the character for fine and cultured taste which has been built up by the best dressed artists in the Rue de la Paix and Place Vendome.

The dress parade in which one model took a prominent part was based entirely on black and white schemes. One mannequin went so far as to wear one white and one black shoe-her dress and even her parasol being divided between the two colors. It was an absurd costume and everyone laughed at it.

But the famous zebra dress worn by the model was really cleverly arranged. Black and white stripes everywhere, even on her stockings. white buttons-the latter Black and

The short box coat bids fair to be a popular style among the younger women this fall, for it accentuates the youthfulness of the figure. Here is shown a model in navy twill with plaited skirt and box coat.

OF INTEREST TO WOMEN

Flame-colored fabrics and all the hades of red are smart for evening. The French heel has taken straighter lines and, like the Cuban heel, is now covered in leather.

Transparent sleeves of a figured fabric are used in frocks of dark blue serge or poiret twill or taffeta. Most of the large hats roll up softly at the back, and there is naturally a orresponding tendency to droop slighty at the sides. Biscuit and gold is a color combination which often is seen in smart cir-cles. If a third color note is desired, olive blends well.

A new trimming that takes the place of fur, is of soft silk spikes of brown, and is so like soft, weepy, shiny seaweed that it has been given that name. The high collar at the back of the iress is a feature of the latest models. and many of the long lines of the one piece dresses are accentuated with half-inch wide pipings of color or white.

Black stripes in plaid ginghams make clever designs and are especially attractive when combined with yellow Vivid green and lavender with black create delightful effects, and there are many tiny pin-checks sponsored by fashionable women.

For the Dressmaker.

Silk or thread becomes shabby and faded if kept in the light or in an openwork basket. To overcome this and to have them convenient for use, take a good-sized square pasteboard Edge of Black Velvet. Ends of box and fit a board inside. Then put Shadow Lace-Edged Veil Caught nails in the board at various intervals in rows far enough apart to allow space for the regular size spool silk or in a convenient place in the sewing room.

city wholly given to idolatry. II. The Parties Concerned (vv. 17-

True to his usual custom Paul went into the Jewish synagogue and entered into earnest argument with the Jews. From them he turned to such as were found in the market place. Here he came into touch with the Epicurean and Stoic philosophers. The former were atheistic materialists. They denied the doctrine of Creation. They gave themselves up to sensual indulgences since they had no idea of future judgment. The latter were pantheists. When they heard the preaching of Paul they desired to know what new doctrine he preached, so they invited him to the Areonagus where he might speak to them of his new doctrine. They inquired as to what this "babbler" might say. The word "babbler" means literally picker." They conceived Paul as a globe-trotter who had gathered up seeds of truth here and there over the world, and that he was somewhat like themselves, interested in talking about that which he knew.

III. Paul's Address on Mars' Hill

(vv. 23-31). 1. The introduction (vv. 22, 23). He did not accuse them of "superstition" as the A. V. would make it, but as in the Am. R. V. he introduces his discourse in a courteous and conciliatory manner, stating that he perceived that they were very religious. This he explained by stating that as he was viewing their city he beheld an altar with an inscription "To the Unknown God." This was his point of contact. He proceeds at once to connect it with the idea of the living God, implying that this altar had been erected to Him. He was too wise to begin at once to denounce heathenism and idolatry.

2. The body of his discourse (vv. (1) A declaration concerning God (vv. 24, 25). (a) He created the material universe (v. 24). This was a direct blow at the philosophy of both the Epicureans and the Stoics. He did not attempt to prove the existence of God; it needs no proof. The Bible everywhere assumes the existence of divine being. (b) His spirituality and immensity (vv. 24, 25). He is not served with "men's hands as though he needed anything," neither is He confined by any sort of religious temple. Being essentially spiritual He demands heart-service, and being transcendent above all He is not confined to earthly temples. (c) His active providence (v. 25). He gives existence, bestows needed gifts, and as sovereign directs all things. (2) Declaration concerning man (vv. 26-31). (a) His common origin (v. 26). This was a blow at the foolish Athenian pride which supposed that they were superior to all other people. This proposition he proved from their own literature (see v. 28). If men are the offspring of God and bear His like ness it is utter folly to make images as the senseless idols were. (b) Nations have their place by the sovereign purpose of God (v. 26). The position and mission of each nation is of God's appointment. (c) Men should seek God (v. 26). His goodness and grace in supplying all our needs, and ordering even the affairs of the nations should move man to see and seek God, for He is indeed very near to every one; so near that our existence and movements are all under His control (v. 27). (d) Pressing obligation to repent (vv. 30, 31). This was his supreme message. Though God had formerly passed over idolatry He now calls to all men to repent. The solemn reason for such action is the coming day of judgment, the credential of which is the resurrection of Jesus Christ from the dead. The judgment of God of an unbelieving world is as sure as this fact. Men will be judged on the basis of their attitude toward Jesus Christ.

IV. Result of Paul's Preaching (vy. 32-34).

1. Some mocked (v. 32). This is ever the case. Today men and women are mocking the preacher who preaches a judgment to come. The attitude of the mocker does not alter the fact of 2. Some procrastinated (v. 32). This

PRESENT GIFTS TO EMPLOYER

To show their esteem for him and as a token of appreciation for the many acts of kindness he has done for them and their families in the past, more than ered at Nemours, the country estate of Alfred I. duPont, last Saturday afternoon and presented to him a silver loving cup. To show their respect and love for Mrs. duPont the old timers presented to her a solid silver service pitcher. Both pieces were suitable incribed and handsomely engraved. The affair was a complete surprise to Mr. duPont for he did not have the slightest inkling of what was coming until the visitors walked into the house. They had been gathered up from their nomes in automobiles and assembled at the main entrance and marched in a body from there to the house. Michael W. Maloney was the chairman of the committee of workers and they were ably assisted by E. M. Davis who gave everything his personal attention and t was largely due to his efficiency that the affair was the great success it proved to be. The powder makers formed in emi-circle in the great reception hall in the house and with Mr. and Mrs. duPont standing before them Mr. Maoney delivered the address of presentation. He said: I thank my conferees number of her friends at luncheon last for the honor they have bestowed upon me, unworthy and incapable as I feel myself. We are here, Mr duPont to nodestly express the great esteem and affection we have for you and, also, to show our appreciation of the interest you have always shown in our affairs. No man ever lived closer to his employes, no man ever showed a greater interest in his employes than you have always shown toward us. Our sorrows have been your sorrows, our joys your joys. This one trait, which long ago. became a habit in you has done more to bind us to you and you to us than all the rest of your most excellent quali-And now to come to the point at issue. finally as Joseph Jefferson would say 'Here's to you and your family and nay you live long and prosper." Mr. and Mrs. duPont were visibly af fected by this display of affection. He was making a visible effort to contro his feelings. Finally he said: "I think it is almost useless for me to even tr to express my appreciation. This i most unexpected and I am at a loss t find words with which to show you as I want to show you how grateful I am for this display of love and affection. think it was on one other occasion few years ago when the boys gave me cup that I laid stress on the fact that the only thing of real value in this life is affection one for another. Money is not everything. We should measure the achievements of a man by what he has been able to win from his fellow men, by the amount of love and affect tion he has been able through his own self to win from those with whom he has been associated. I accept this token as an expression of your love and esteem and I wish to thank you mos heartily in my own name and in the name of Mrs. duPont." The guests then were served with refreshments on the lawn and later the entire party with the host and hostess was photographed together. Mr. and Mrs. duPont shook hands with each man and told him personally how muc they appreciated the presents. The guests were given souvenirs of Nemours and were taken to their homes in auto mobiles provided by Mr. Davis. The entire affair was thoroughly enjoyed by Mr. and Mrs. duPont and all their guests. Mr. duPont knew all his callers by their first names for he had worked in the powder mills with many of ther and he spent sometime laughing and joking with the old timers and recount were boys together or worked side by side in the powder mills.

The cup and pitcher are inscribe thus: "Presented to Mr. and Mrs. Al fred I. duPont, at Nemours, September 3, 1921, by the Employes and Families of the Brandywine Powder Mills, who were their guests on the Steamer City of Wilmington June 8th, 1921." A picture of the steamer is engraved on the ed on the road leading to Warwick, on Saturday afternoon last, when an automobile driven by Harry Feinberg, of Wilmington, collided with a farm wagon belonging to Mr. Benjamin F. Simmons. Both the automobile and farm wagon were driving west on the highway and the Feinberg car struck the rear end of the wagon completely demolishing both rear wheels and making a wreck of the vehicle. The car was also badly damaged.

Harry Feinberg sustained a broken limb and was otherwise injured, while Mr. George Crouch, who was driving the farm wagon was thrown violently to the roadside receiving severe lacerations of the scalp, a badly bruised arm and was otherwise seriously injured. One of the horses attached to the farm wagon had a leg broken in the crash and was later killed by its owner. Mr. Feinberg was brought to the office of Dr. E. M. Vaughan, who gave him medical attention and then rushed his patient to the P. & S. Hospital in Wilmington, and Mr. Crouch was taken to the office of Dr. E. G. Clark where his wounds were dressed.
